ENGLISH Scarlet

A Book of English Reader & English Grammar and Composition

Rekha Solanki (M. A. Eng. , B. Ed.)

English has emerged as the premier language of communication for the people world over. English Scarlet, a multi-skill package for the learners of English Literature and Grammar. It necessitates all of us to have a good command over this beautiful language.

Level of difficulty in vocabulary, grammar, comprehension and compositions is increased gradually through the series. This enables the students to upgrade their skills as they move up without any stress. Students are encouraged to use their imaginative powers through exercises and activities given in this book. A lot of emphasis is given on listening and speaking skills through varied exercises. Value of correct pronunciation in any language can never be undermined.

Most stories also have a message for the young minds to inculcate good values in them, right from the beginning.

Imaginative artwork, fresh passages and interesting exercises will help evoke love and interest for the language in all the students. The publishers and editors would appreciate feedback from pupils, teachers and parents.

CHAPTER

Who Will Bell The Cat?

Scan Me

There were many mice in a house. Jerry was a smart little mouse. He too lived in that house along with his family. They all were happy because there was always enough to eat around the house.

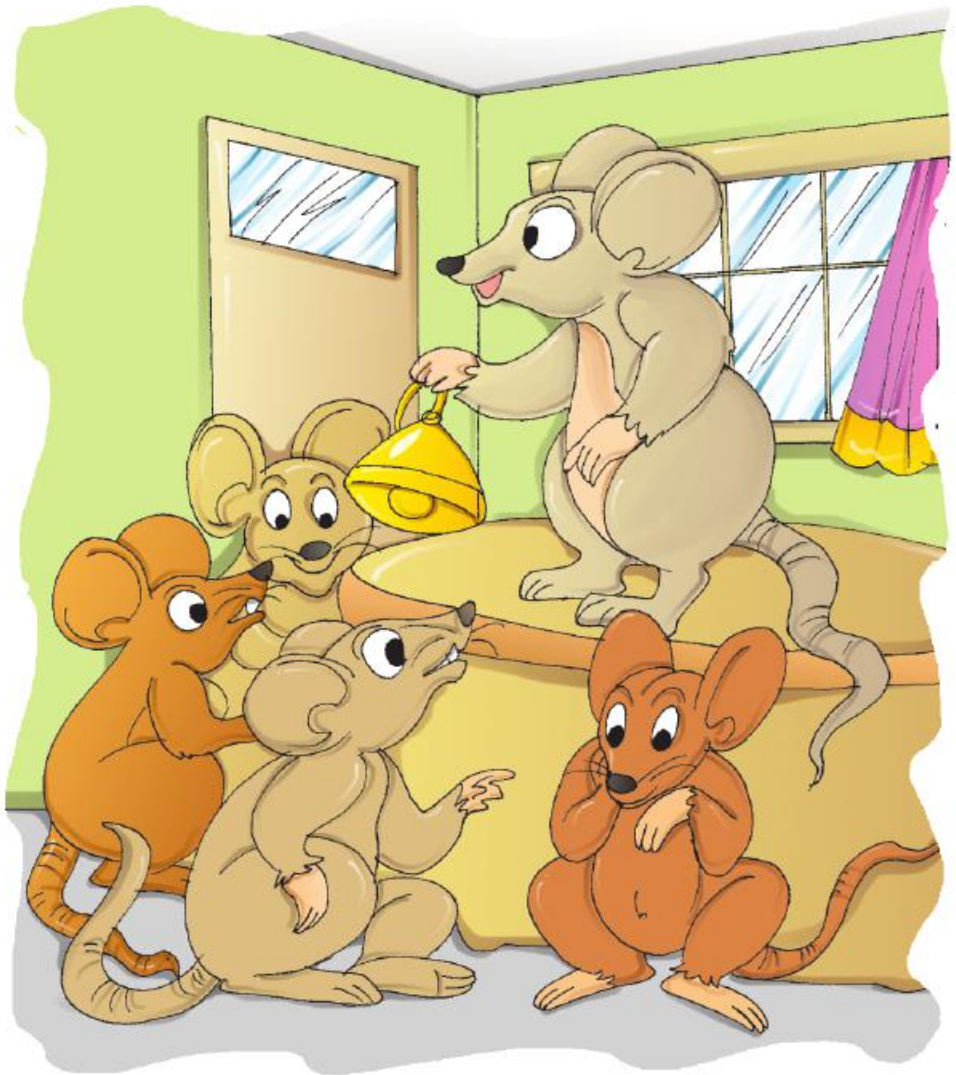

They spent their time jumping and playing inside the big old building.

One night a big fat cat entered the house. His name was Tom. He was very hungry. When he saw so many mice, he became very happy. Tom pounced and killed a mouse with a quick blow of his paw. He gulped down the mouse. Then he killed a few more, just for fun. From then on, Tom began visiting the house every night.

Now the mice lived in terror of Tom. At last they had a meeting. One mouse said, "Let's tie a bell around the cat's neck. This way, we shall hear the cat coming. We can then run away to safety."

All the mice shouted, "Good!" They thought it was a brilliant idea. Jerry, who was also listening, stood up and said, "But who is going to bell the Cat?"

At this, everybody just looked at each other. Slowly they went back to their holes.

Friendship

Two friends were travelling through a thick forest. They were afraid of wild animals. They promised to help each other in case of danger.

As they were walking, suddenly they saw a bear coming towards them.

One of them knew how to climb up a tree. So, without a thought of his friend, he quickly climbed the nearest tree.

The other friend was left standing alone. He had an idea. He lay down on the ground and held his breath as if he were dead.

The bear came up to the man lying on the ground and sniffed him all over.

The bear thought that he was dead and walked away.

When the bear was gone, his friend came down from the tree. He said to him, "The bear seemed to be talking to you. Dear friend, please tell me what he whispered in your ear."

"The bear told me," replied, "Never trust a friend who runs away in time of danger."

Wise Blue Jackal

Once a jackal was very hungry. He roamed about in the jungle in search of food. He wandered into the nearby city. Tired and hungry, he walked slowly through the lanes.

Some stray dogs saw him. They began barking and ran after the jackal. As he saw the dogs chasing him, the jackal broke into a run. He ran with all his might to save his life.

Suddenly, he saw a house with its door open. He rushed into the building. The house belonged to a dyer. There was a large tub in the courtyard. The jackal fell into it. The tub had blue dye in it. The dogs barked at the door for sometime. When the jackal did not come out, they went away.

When the jackal finally came out of the tub, he had turned completely blue. He hurried back to the jungle hoping not to find the dogs again.

In the jungle, he noticed that all the animals were running away from him in fear. He realised that they might be afraid because of his strange colour. He came upon an idea.

He called all the animals and said, "I have been sent by God. I am your new king. You shall all obey me."

All the animals agreed and bowed before him. From that day onwards, the clever jackal lived like a king.

Villager and The Lion

Once a lion was caught in a forest and put in a cage. One day a villager named Dayal was passing by. The lion saw him and asked Dayal to open the cage. Dayal was very afraid. He said to the lion, "If I open the gate of this cage, you will come out and eat me up."

The lion replied, "Be a good man and set me free. I promise not to harm you in any way."

Dayal was a simple man. He believed the lion and opened the cage. The lion came out roaring. Now he wanted to eat Dayal as he hadn't eaten for many days. Dayal began to plead for his life.

A clever fox heard them. "What's the matter?" asked the fox. Dayal told the whole story to him. "Let us see how exactly it all happened," the fox said. He asked the lion to get back inside the cage. God Always With You!

Once upon a time, there lived a priest called Ramanand. He was a great believer in God.

He had a wooden idol in his cottage. He had placed it on a shelf. He worshipped it everyday.

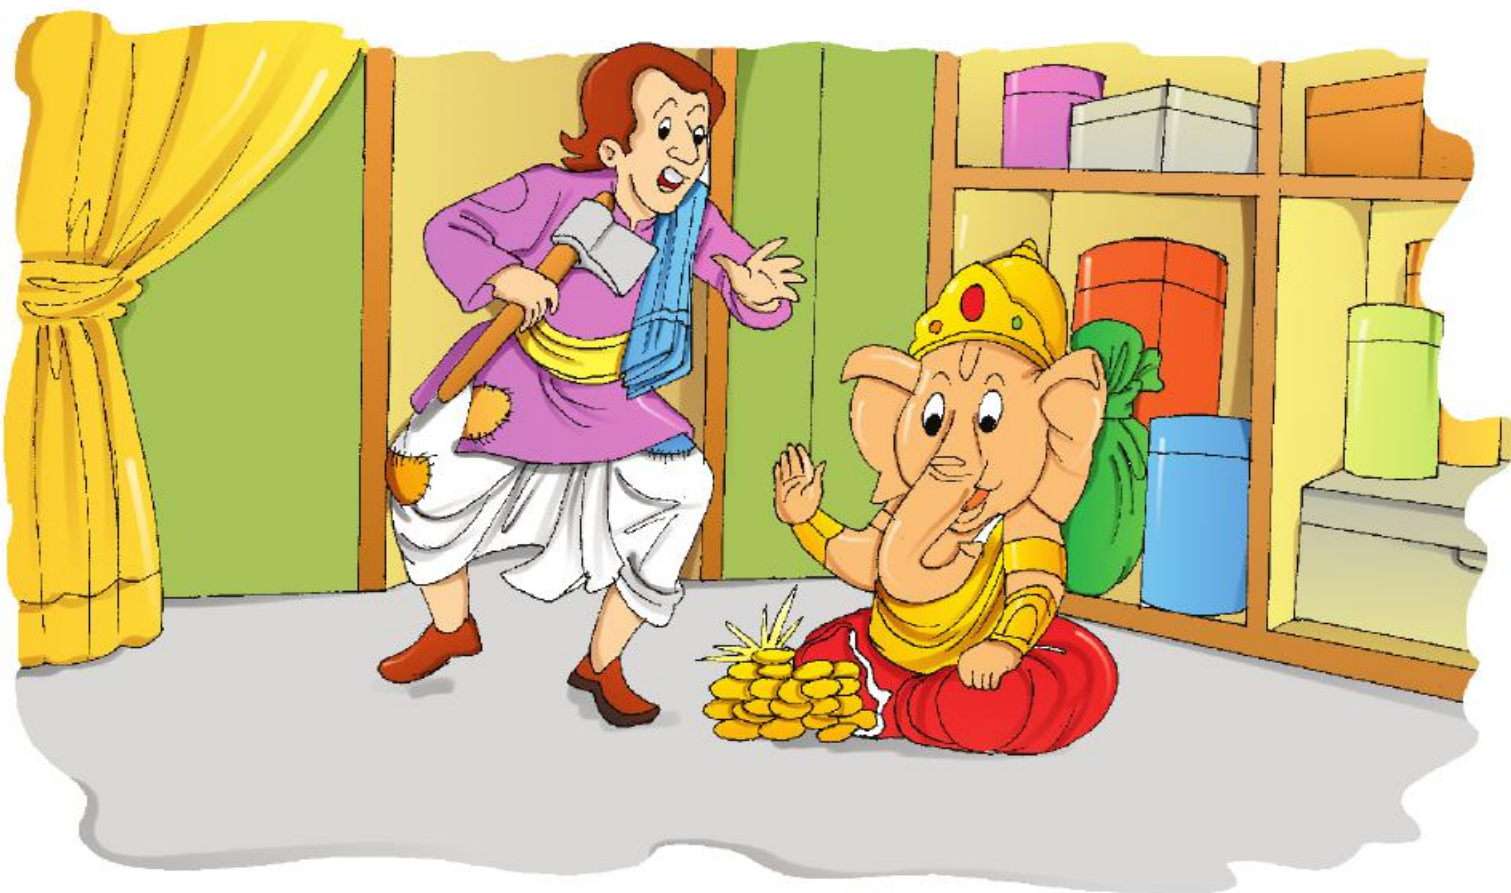

He used to perform Puja for the people in the neighbourhood. He was called upon occasions such as marriages, naming of newly born children, etc. People gave Ramanand money and gifts for his work. With great difficulty, he could manage two meals a day.

For all his efforts, he remained very poor. He would say to himself, “Hey Lord! I worship you everyday. I am an honest man. Why can't I have enough to live happily?”

One day Ramanand fell sick. He lay shivering in his cot. He could not go to work for many days. Nobody came to see him. There was nothing left in the house to eat. He began to starve.

He became very angry with God. He slowly got up and picked up the wooden idol. He took an axe and chopped the idol into pieces.

Lo and behold! Many gold coins fell out of the statue.

Never Trust Wicked Fellow

There were four bulls in a jungle. They were fast friends and lived together. A lion was the king of the jungle. He wanted to kill and eat them up. He thought out a plan. He went to the first bull and whispered in his ear, "Your friends eat all the green grass and leave only dry grass for you."

So, the first bull began to graze alone and the other bulls too did the same. In this way, the lion succeeded in separating them. Then he killed the bulls one by one and ate them up.

Do Good Get Good

Once a mouse came under a lion's paw. The lion wanted to kill him. The mouse requested the lion for mercy as he might be of some use to him in future. Hearing this, the lion laughed and he left the mouse. Some days later the lion was trapped. When the mouse came to know this, he came to his help and set him free.
