PREFACE

'Smart English' a new series of English text books comprising of eight books from I to VIII following the pattern of NEP 2020. The series has been designed keeping in view the modern teaching, innovative and need-based learning of English at the primary and junior level. The main aim of the series is to guide the beginners in the proper way of understanding by giving them the knowledge of the basic and elementary concepts of English language.

The approach of these books is child oriented and activity based. These are designed to promote language development through various skills like comprehension, word building, written work, communication and discussion.

The texts included in the series have been carefully selected and graded. These are value-based and offer topics to suit every taste and interest. Special emphasis has been laid on the preservation of our rich heritage and the protection of the environment.

Exercises set at the end of each lesson will engage the students individually or in pairs or groups. It will instil in them the habit of independent thinking and also give them an equal opportunity to express their views, ideas and opinions. New words have been introduced in each lesson and their use explained with a view to enhance the vocabulary power of the students. It will encourage the students to use dictionary for learning new words and will also familiarise them with minute grammatical aspects of the language.

We sincerely believe that our efforts will be appreciated both by the teachers as well as the learners. Suggestions, if any, for improvement of the series will be thankfully acknowledged and incorporated in subsequent editions.

1 The Daffodils

I wandered lonely as a cloud
That floats on high o'er vales and hills.
When all at once I saw a crowd,
A host, of golden daffodils;
Beside the lake, beneath the trees,
Fluttering and dancing in the breeze.

Continuous as the stars that shine
And twinkle on the Milky Way,
They stretched in never-ending line
Along the margin of a bay:
Ten thousand saw I at a glance,
Tossing their heads in sprightly dance.

The waves beside them danced; but they
Out-did the sparkling waves in glee:
A poet could not be put gay,
In such a jocund company:
I gazed – and gazed – but little thought
What wealth the show to me had brought:

For oft, when on my couch I lie
 In vacant or in pensive mood,
 They flash upon that inward eye
 Which is the bliss of solitude;
 And then my heart with pleasure fills,
 And dances with the daffodils.

—William Wordsworth

The Hardworking Ant

Name the smallest insect you have seen, and the wisest. Is it the fly? No, it is not. Is it the mosquito? No, not the mosquito. Then it must be the worm. No, none of these. It is the ant—the commonest, the smallest and the wisest insect. The story of an ant's life sounds almost untrue. But people have kept ants as pets, and have watched their daily behaviour closely. So we know a number of facts about this tiny, hardworking and intelligent creature. There are many kinds of ants. The commonest among them are the black or red ones. We have seen them since we were children, but have not paid enough attention to them. Where do they live in? Their comfortable homes are called 'nests' or 'anthills'. Each has hundreds of little rooms and passages. In some of these rooms the queen ant lays eggs. Others are nurseries for the youngones (called grubs). Workers have their reserved quarters. They spend most of their time searching for food. Some rooms serve as storehouses for this food. Soldiers have separate barracks. No worker has ever tried to live in a soldier's house; no soldier has ever gone out searching for food. No worker or soldier or cleaner has ever harmed a grub. So you see an ant's life is very peaceful. Each does its share of work intelligently and bravely and, never fights with other member of the group.

The queen is the mother of the entire population of the colony. It lives for about fifteen years. It has a pair of wings but bites them off water its 'wedding' flight. This flight takes place on a hot summer day. The queen leaves the nest and goes out to meet a male ant, or drone a high up in the air. On its return to earth it gets rid of its wings and then does nothing but lay eggs.

Each hatch and grub comes out.

Soldiers guard them. Workers feed and clean them, and also carry them about daily for airing, exercise and sunshine. Two or three weeks later, grubs become cocoons and lie without food or activity for three weeks or more. Then the cocoons break and perfect ant appear. Now it is a time for teaching and training. New ants learn their duties from old ants as workers, soldiers, builders, cleaners, etc.

An anthill is a home not only for ants but also for some other creatures—beetles, lesser breeds of ants and the greenfly. Why do ants want these alien creatures to live in their nests? For several reasons : some give off smell pleasant to the ant's senses; other give sweet juices, and some are just pets or playthings like cats and dogs to human beings. The greenfly is the ant's cow. The ants train it to give honeydew (like milk) with the touch of their antennae.

They milk it just as we milk the cow.

Have humans learned as much as ants have? Perhaps they have but they have not put their learning to good use. They may still learn a few things from this tiny teacher hard work, sense of duty and discipline, cleanliness, care for the young ones and above all, a firm loyalty to the land where they live.

New Words to Learn

wisest : most intelligent; creature : imaginary animal; barracks : building where soldiers live and work.

A Man's Job

While playing in the lawn, Rahul saw Sunil coming out of the house with his bat, wickets and ball. He ran towards him and asked, "Sunil Dada, are you going to play cricket?"

"Yes."

"Can I come with you?" asked Rahul eagerly.

"Oh, no, you are small and we, grown-up boys, play a very rough game."

"Please, Dada, even if I can't play, at least I can do something. I can collect the ball for you people."

Rahul insisted. He was not ready to give up easily 'No'.

"We play with cork ball and it is very hard. You may get hurt," said Sunil as he put his cricket gear on his bicycle and rode off at the top speed.

Rahul watched him with admiration, "Oh, how fast he can cycle!" he thought. Sunil was his hero and he adored him. His sour pain was that Sunil treated him as a kid and that he hated. He talked to himself, "I am not mere a child, I am going to be nine next month. I walk alone from the bus stop to the house. Mother sends me to the milk booth to fetch milk sometimes and, above all, I can climb a tree which even Sunil Dada cannot."

Rahul lived on the first floor while Sunil lived on the ground floor of the same bungalow. Rahul lived with his parents and grandmother. Sunil, who was fourteen, lived with his parents, grandparents and grown-up brother. His father owned a big jewellery shop in the city.

As both Rahul's parents worked, he spent most of the day with his grandmother. There were not many children of Rahul's age in the neighbourhood, so Sunil played with Rahul sometimes.

One day Sunil told Rahul, "I won tennis in the school fete yesterday. I have kept it for you. It is safe enough for you to play cricket with it."

"But dada, I am no more a small child," blurted out Rahul indignantly.

"Fine, don't get so worked up."

Sunil looked amused at the outburst.

"I am free in the afternoon. Come, we will play monopoly. You can have lunch with me."

"Oh, good. I will just go upstairs and change my clothes."

Rahul dashed up the stairs, threw the school bag off and changed his clothes.

As he was putting on his T-shirt and shorts, he shouted, "Dadi, I am going to Sunil Dada's house to play monopoly. I will have my lunch there." The whole exercise took a few minutes and soon he was at Sunil's front door. He pressed the bell and waited, but no one opened the door. He again pressed the bell for a longer period. He pressed his ear against the door and heard footsteps behind the closed door. The door was still closed. 'Strange', thought Rahul, 'only five minutes earlier Sunil Dada had invited me and now he is not opening the door.'

He ran to the back and found that door also bolted from inside. Then he ran towards the left side of Sunil's room. He went to the window, which was closed, its panes were covered with black paper. Suddenly he heard a voice, "Who, who is there?" It was Sunil's voice but he was speaking in whispers.

"Robbers, have they got pistols?"

"Yes, they have. They were here when I came. As soon as I entered, they overpowered me and locked me in this room with my grandmother. Are you scared?"

"Oh, no, not at all," said Rahul.

"Then inform the police. Can you manage?"

"Oh, certainly."

Keeping to the hedge Rahul quietly walked out of the gate, and then ran with all his might. He was breathless when he reached the Police Assistance Booth. He found the policemen and started speaking at once.

"Sir, please come with me. My house is being robbed. I mean my friend's. I mean Sunil Dada's house..."

"What are you blabbering, child? Don't waste our time, we are too busy for your pranks," said one of the policemen and started writing in his register. Another policeman was talking on the telephone.

'Every minute is precious', thought Rahul desperately. He looked around and noticed a watch lying at the counter. He grabbed the watch and started running. the policemen were bewildered for a minute. Two policemen ran after Rahul shouting, "Hey, you thief. Give back the watch or we will lock you in jail." The road was empty, therefore, no one else joined the chase. By the time Rahul reached the gate of the house, the policemen caught him.

"Please don't get angry. I never intended to steal your watch. I only played this trick to bring you here," said Rahul. He then narrated the whole story to them.

Now, the policemen looked less hostile. One took a notebook and pen from his pocket and wrote something. Then he tore the page from the notebook and gave it to Rahul and said, "Son, run back to the booth again as fast as you can and give this to the policemen there. Tell me, which is the house?"

"Go straight to the left side of the house and knock the window. Sunil Dada is there," Rahul spoke and ran back to the police booth at top speed, within minutes he was there again.

The policeman shouted as he saw Rahul, "You naughty boy, where is the watch?" "Oh believe me, I am not a thief. Read this quickly, your friend has sent it."

Rahul handed the note to the policeman and waited impatiently. As soon as the policeman read the note, he swung into action. He gave some message on the walkie-talkie. Soon a flying squad arrived. Rahul and other policemen also climbed into the jeep. When they reached Sunil's house, the policemen who were already there, joined them and informed, "Robbers are still inside, two of them are armed with pistols. In all, there are four."

The police quietly surrounded the house.

After a while the front door opened and a man holding a pistol came out. Cautiously he looked around and finding no one, he signaled to his friends to come out. Three more persons came out. One was holding a canvas bag, the other a pistol and the third was empty-handed. As they started moving towards the gate, the inspector shouted "Catch!" and the police party attacked.

Thoroughly unprepared for this sudden attack the robbers lost their wits. They were soon overpowered and disarmed. The police arrested them and herded them into the jeep. The policemen accompanying the robbers left in the jeep, and rest of the men went inside. They untied Sunil and his grandmother. Then they went into other bedroom where they untied Sunil's mother and grandfather. His grandfather was badly injured in the scuffle with the robbers. The ambulance was called through wireless since the robbers had disconnected the telephone.

Meanwhile they all assembled in the drawing room. Rahul narrated the whole story. Gaps were filled by Sunil and Sunil's mother. The police inspector patted Rahul and said, "You all must thank this small boy for your rescue. It was his presence of mind which saved you."

Sunil came to Rahul and said, "Hey, I always treated you as a small kid. But you are a very brave boy. You really did a man's job."

For Rahul, this was the happiest moment. He was no more a small child for Sunil Dada. His face beamed with joy. "Sunil Dada, can I come to play cricket with you now?" he asked shyly.

New Words to Learn

admiration : a feeling of liking very much; outburst : sudden expression of a strong feeling; overpowered : to be too strong; cautiously : very carefully.

LET'S LEARN GRAMMAR

The Active and Passive Voice

- ▶ We know that transitive verbs transfer the action to the object in a sentence.

Examples : 1. We cracked the nut.

The action implied by the verb 'cracked' transfers to the object 'nut'.

2. She shut the door.

The action 'shut' transfers to the 'door'.

3. We opened the umbrella.

The action 'opened' transfers to the 'umbrella'.

- ▶ Transitive verbs can be turned into passive voice.

Examples : 1. The nut was cracked by us.

2. The door was shut by her.

3. The umbrella was opened by us.

- ▶ When we turn active voice into passive voice, we make the object of the sentence its subject.

- ▶ We can make either the direct object or the indirect object the subject of the passive voice.

Example : The director gave the best salesman a raise. (Active Voice)

A raise was given to the best salesman by the director. (Passive Voice)

Or

The best salesman was given a raise by the director. (Passive Voice)

- ▶ However, the first sentence sounds much better than the other two. It is important not to use passive voice when it is not necessary.

Read these sentences :

1. Everyone clapped for her.
2. She was clapped for by everyone.

Do you think the second sentence sounds meaningful? Do we need to present it in the passive voice at all?

A Visit to the Dentist

As soon as the nurse saw Fudge, she said, "How's my favourite patient?" She gave him a hug and a little book to read. To me she said, "Good morning Peter!"

It burns me up the way people treat Fudge. He is not so special. He is just little, that's all! But some day he is going to be nine years old too. I cannot wait until he is. Then he will know there is nothing so great about him after all.

Soon the nurse said, "Fudge, Dr Brown is ready for you. Come with me now."

Fudge took the nurse's hand.

Dr Brown has this rule about mothers in the examining room with kids – they are not allowed! Mothers are a big problem, Dr Brown told me once. I agreed.

I looked through a National Geographic Magazine while I waited. After a few minutes the nurse came out and whispered something to my mother. I looked up, wondering what the big secret was.

Then my mother said, "Peter, Dr Brown would like you to help him with Fudge." "Help him?" I said, "I am not dentist!" The nurse said, "Peter dear, ... if you will just come with me I am sure everything will work out fine".

So I went with the nurse. "What do I have to do?" I asked her.

"Oh, not much. Dr Brown just wants you to show Fudge how you open your mouth and how he checks your teeth."

"What do I have to do that for?" I asked "I do not need a check-up yet. I just had one last month."

"Your brother would not open his mouth this morning," the nurse whispered. I thought that was pretty funny. I never considered refusing to open my mouth at the dentist's office. When he says 'open' – I open!

When we reached the examining room Fudge was sitting in the big chair. He had a towel around his neck and looked all ready for action.

Dr Brown was showing him lots of little things and explaining what he does with each one. Fudge kept nodding but he would not open his mouth.

"Ah.... Peter!" Dr Brown said when he saw me. "Would you open your mouth so I can count your teeth?"

That is what he tells little kids he is doing ... counting their teeth. Little kids will believe anything!

I went along with Dr Brown joke. I opened my mouth very wide. Much wider than when I am the real patient. He put his mirror in and said, "Wonderful teeth. Just beautiful. Such a shame Fudge cannot open his mouth the way you do."

"Can so," Fudge said.

"No," Dr Brown told him, "you cannot open your mouth nearly as good as Peter."

"Can so ... see!" Fudge, "Dr Brown said" "It is still not as good as Peter."

So Fudge opened his mouth really wide. "Count teeth!" he said. "Count Fudge teeth!" "Well ..." Dr Brown said again scratching his head. "I guess as long as you are here I might as well count your teeth. So he checked Fudge's mouth.

When he was through Fudge said, "See ... see... just like Peet-tah!"

"Yes," Dr Brown said smiling. "I can see that you are just like Peter." He gave me a wink.

I liked the way Dr Brown tricked Fudge into opening his mouth.

Dr Brown thanked me for helping him. My mother made another appointment for Fudge. The nurse kissed my brother goodbye and we left.

"That was not so, bad was it, Peter?" my mother said.

"It could have been worse," I admitted.

Theseus and the Minotaur

Once upon a time, a long time ago, there lived a king named Minos. King Minos lived on a lovely island called Crete. King Minos had a powerful navy, a beautiful daughter and a really big palace. Still now and then, King Minos grew bored. Whenever king Minos was bored, he took his navy and attacked Athens, a town on the other side of the sea.

In desperation, the king of Athens offered king Minos a deal. If Minos would leave Athens alone, Athens would send seven Athenian boys and seven Athenian girls to Crete every nine years to be eaten by the Minotaur.

The Minotaur was a horrible monster that lived in the centre of a huge maze on the island of Crete. King Minos loved that old monster. He did like to give his monster a treat now and then. He knew his people would prefer he fed his monster Athenian children rather than ... well, after thinking it over, king Minos took the deal.

Nine years passed swiftly. It was just about time for Athens to send seven boys and seven girls to Crete to be eaten by Minotaur. Everyone in Athens was crying.

Prince Theseus of Athens was very young. He knew that a deal was a deal. But he was sure it was wrong to send small children to be eaten by a monster just to avoid a battle with king Minos. Prince Theseus told his father (the king) that he was going to Crete as the seventh son of Athens. He was going to kill the Minotaur and end the terror.

“The Minotaur is a terrible monster! What makes you think you can kill it?” cried his father.

“I will find a way,” Theseus replied gently “The God will help me”. His father begged him not to go but the prince took his place as the seventh Athenian boys and seven Athenian girls, Prince Theseus sailed towards Crete.

When the prince and the children arrived on the island of Crete, king Minos and his daughter the Princess Ariadne, came out to greet them. The king told the children that they would not be eaten until the next day and to enjoy themselves in the palace in the meantime. The Princess Ariadne did not say anything. But her eyes narrowed thoughtfully. Late that night, she wrote Prince Theseus a note and slipped it under his bedroom door.

Dear Theseus (Ariadne Wrote)

I am a beautiful princess as you probably noticed the minute you saw me. I am also a very bored princess. Without my help the Minotaur will surely gobble you up. I know a trick or two that will save your life. If I help you kill the monster, you must promise to take me away from this tiny island so that others can admire my beauty. If interested in this deal, meet me by the gate to the labyrinth in one hour.

*Your very truly
Princess Ariadne*

Prince Theseus slipped out of the palace and waited patiently by the gate. Princess Ariadne finally showed up. In her hands, she carried a sword and ball of string.

Ariadne gave the sword and the ball of string to Prince Theseus, “Hide these inside the entrance to the maze. Tomorrow, when you and other children from Athens enter the Labyrinth, wait until the gate is closed, then tie the string to the door unroll it as you move through the maze. That way, you can find your own way back again. The sword, well, you know what to do with the sword,” she laughed.

Theseus thanked the princess for her kindness. “Do not forget, now,” she cautioned Theseus. “You must take me with you so that all the people can marvel at my beauty. A deal is a deal.”

The next morning, the Athenian children, including Prince Theseus, were shoved into the maze. The door was locked firmly behind them following Ariadne’s directions, Theseus tie one end of the string to the door. He told the children to stay by the door. Their job was to make sure the string stayed tied so that Theseus could find his way back. Theseus entered the maze alone.

He found his way to centre of the maze using the sword Ariadne had given him, Theseus killed the monstrous beast. He followed the string back and knocked on the door.

Princess Ariadne was waiting. She opened the door. Without anyone noticing, Prince Theseus and the children of Athens ran to their ship and sailed quietly away. Princess Ariadne sailed away with them.

On the way home, they stopped for supplies on the tiny island of Naxos. Princess Ariadne insisted on coming ashore. There was nothing much to do on the island. Soon, she feel asleep. All the people gathered to watch the sleeping princess. She was a lovely sight indeed Theseus sailed quietly away with the children of Athens and left her there sleeping.

After all, a deal is a deal.

My Computer

Computers have been around for quite a few years. Some of your parents were probably around in 1951 when the first computer have changed so rapidly. Many people cannot keep up with changes.

Since ancient times, people have had ways to deal with data and numbers. Early people tied knots in rope and carved marks on clay tablets to keep track of livestock and stock. Some people considered the 5000 years old ABACUS – a frame with beads strung on wires to be the first true computing aid.

As trade and tax system grew in complexity, people saw that faster, more reliable and exact tools were needed for doing maths and keeping records.

In the mid 1600's Blaise Pascal and his father, who was tax officer himself, were working on taxes for the French Government in Paris. The two spent hours figuring and refiguring taxes that each citizen owed. Young Blaise decided in 1642 to guild an adding and subtraction machine that could aid in such a tedious and time consuming process. The machine Blaise made has a set of eight gears that worked together like an odometer keeps track of car's mileage. His machine faced many problems like it was always breaking down. Second, the machine was slow and extremely costly and people were afraid to use the machine thinking it might replace their jobs.

The next big step for computers arrived in the 1830's when Charles Babbage decided to build a machine to help him complete and print mathematical tables. Babbage was mathematician who taught at Cambridge University in England. He began planning his calculating machine calling it the Analytical Engine. The idea for this machine was amazingly like the computer we know today. It was to read a program from punched cards, figure and store the answers to different problems and print the answer on paper. He died before he could complete the machine. However because of his remarkable ideas and work, Charles Babbage is known as the father of computers.

The next huge step for computers came when Herman Hollerith entered a contest given by the U.S. Censes Bureau. The contest was to see who could build a machine that would count and record information faster. Hollerith, a young man built a machine called the Tabulating machine that read and sorted data from punched cards. The holes punched in the cards matched each person's answers to questions. Tabulator read the punched card when they passed over tiny brushes.

The first computer was made in 1944 by Harvard's Professor Howard Aiken. The Mark I computer was very much like the design of Charles Babbage's having mainly mechanical parts, but with some electronic parts. This all purpose machine is what we now know as the PC or personal computer. The Mark I was the first computer financed by IBM and was about 50 feet long and 8 feet tall.

The first electronic computer was the ENIAC (Electronic Numerical Integrator And Computer). ENIAC was a general purpose digital computer built in 1946 by J. Presper Eckert and John Mauchly. The ENIAC was built at the time of world war II. The ENIAC was 100 feet long and 10 feet tall.

A new type of computer began with John Von Neumann's development of software written in binary code. It was Neumann who began the practice of storing data and instructions in binary code and initiated the use of memory to store data, as well as programs.

While the modern computers are far better and faster than the ENIAC and EDVAC of its times. Computers of today would not have been possible with the knowledge and work of great inventors and pioneers.

New Words to Learn

carved : make it by cutting it out of wood or stone; aid : is money, services that are provided for people; complexity : is the state of having different parts connected to each other in complicated way; tedious : boring; pioneers : One of the first person to be involved in it and develop it.

St. Mother Teresa

Mother Teresa was born in Albania on 26th August, 1910. She started Missionaries of Charity in 1950, received Noble Prize for peace in 1979 and also received Bharat Ratna in 1980.

Mother Teresa was one of the great servants of humanity. She was an Albanian Catholic nun who came to India and founded the Missionaries of Charity in Kolkata. Mother Teresa attained Indian citizenship. Her selfless work among the poverty stricken people of Kolkata (Calcutta) is an inspiration for people all over the world and she was honoured with Noble Prize for her work.

Mother Teresa's original name was Agnes Gonxha Bojaxhiu. She was born on August 26, 1910 in Skopje, Macedonia. Her father was a successful merchant and she was youngest of the three sibling. At the age of 12, she decided that she wanted to be a missionary and spread the love of Christ. At the age of 18, she left her parental home in Skopje and joined the sisters of Loreto, an Irish community of nuns with missions in India.

After a few months of training at the Institute of the Blessed Virgin Mary, Mother Teresa came to India On May 24, 1931. She took her initial vows as a nun. From 1931 to 1948, Mother Teresa taught geography and catechism at St. Mary's High School in Calcutta had a deep impact on Mother Teresa mind and in 1948, she received permission from her superiors to leave the convent school and devote herself to working among the poorest of the poor in the slums of Kolkata (Calcutta).

After a short course with the Medical Mission Sisters in Patna she returned to Kolkata (Calcutta) and found temporary lodging with the little sisters of the poor. She started an open air school for homeless children. Soon she was joined by voluntary helpers, and she received financial support from Church organisations and the municipal authorities. On October 7, 1950, Mother Teresa received permission from the Vatican to start her own order. Vatican originally labelled the order as the Diocesan Congregation of the Kolkata (Calcutta) Diocese and it later came to be known as the 'Missionaries of Charity'.

The Missionaries of Charity, which began as a small order with 12 members in Kolkata, today has more than 4,000 nuns running orphanages, AIDS hospices, charity centres worldwide and caring for refugees, the blind, disabled, aged, alcoholics, the poor and homeless and victims of floods, epidemics in Asia, Africa and Australia.

Mother Teresa's work has been recognised and acclaimed throughout the world and she has received a number of awards and distinctions. These include Pope John XXIII Peace Prize (1971), Nehru Prize for Promotion of International Peace and Understanding (1972), Balzan Prize (1978), Nobel Peace Prize (1979), and Bharat Ratna (1980).

On March 13, 1997, Mother Teresa stepped down from the head of Missionaries of Charity and died on September 5, 1997.

Story of the Fire

Early man did not know what fire was, but he must have seen the damage it could cause. He must have watched lightning and volcanoes long before he began to use fire himself. Fire was powerful and dangerous and he was frightened.

Fire may have puzzled early man but we now know that fire is the result of a chemical reaction when the oxygen in the air combines with carbon and hydrogen in a fuel, a chemical reaction takes place. Energy in the form of heat and light is released in this process this is why, when you blow on smouldering paper, it often bursts into flame. The third thing needed to make fire is heat. Fuel and oxygen do not make fire by themselves, or else a newspaper or a stick lying in the open would catch fire on its own.

To burn a piece of paper or wood, we heat it before it catches fire. We generally do it with a lighted match. Every fuel has a particular temperature at which it begins to burn this temperature is called the 'flash point' or 'kindling temperature' of the fuel.

It is sometimes said that fire is a good servant but mad master. It only means that fire is very useful as long as it is kept under control.

For instance, we use it to cook our food, warm our homes in winter and to generate electricity. But, on the other hand, if fire gets out of control it can be very dangerous. Each year thousands of homes and shops are damaged by fire. Vast areas of forest are also destroyed and hundred of people are killed or injured.

Just as three things are needed to start a fire, there are three main ways in which a fire can be put out. In each, one of the three things needed for burning is taken away.

For example, we can take away the fuel. If the fire has no fuel to feed on, no burning can take place. We often let a fire die out simply by not adding more fuel to it.

The second way of putting out a fire is to prevent oxygen from reaching it. No supply of oxygen means no fire. Small fires can be put out or 'smothered' with a damp blanket or a sack. This stops oxygen searching the burning material. Sometimes carbon dioxide is used to extinguish fire. It does not allow oxygen to reach the burning material.

The third way of putting out fire is to remove the heat. If the temperature can be brought down below the flash point the fuel stops burning. You blow on a burning matchsticks or a candle to put it out. In doing so, you remove the hot air around the flame bringing down its temperature below the flash point and the candle goes out. Sometimes, water is sprayed on a fire. It absorbs heat from the burning fuel and lowers the temperature. The blanket of water also cuts off the supply of oxygen and the fire is extinguished.

Some fires cannot be put out with water. If water is sprayed onto an oil fire, the oil will float to the top of the water and continue to burn. This can be very dangerous because water can flow quickly carrying the burning oil with it and spreading the fire. Water should also not be used on fires caused by electrical appliances. The person spraying water might receive an electric shock and be killed. Carbon dioxide is the best extinguisher. It is the best thing to fight an electrical fire.

We spend millions of rupees each year in fighting fires. And we spend more trying to find new ways of preventing fires from happening and getting out of control. On the whole, we have learnt rather well to control fire and put it to good use everyday life.

Long ago, there were no fireman. When fire broke out, everybody became a firefighter. People formed human chains (they still do if required) and passed buckets of water from a well or a pond to the blaze. Now there are laws about building construction which ensure that space is left between buildings to reduce the fire risk. Every new building especially a public place, must ensure observance of fire prevention norms. Bands of firefighting workers with special equipment, known as fire brigades, are there to put out fires. Firefighters are highly trained people. They possess many skills. They cut off electricity supply, knock down dangerous walls, spray water and other materials to bring fire under control. They are also trained in first aid so that they can help people suffering from burns or from the effects of smoke.

The discovery of fire and its uses helped early man to cope with nature better and gradually adopt a settled mode of life. Fire is still worshipped in many parts of the world. Fire is indeed a friend but as know it can be a dangerous enemy once it gets out of control.

10 Women Empowerment

Kamaladevi Chattopadhyaya was born on 3 April 1903, in an educated family in Mangaluru. Her grandmother was a great reader and a keen learner. Kamala's mother was also well reader. Those were the days when parents did not believe in educating their daughters. Daughters were expected to do only household work and Kamala's mother was well aware of this. She, therefore, sent her daughter to school. While in the convent school, Kamala learnt the importance of self-discipline and service to humanity.

Kamala's early life was not an easy one. When her father died, she was in her teens. She and her sister were the only children of her parents. Since there was no male heirs in the family, Kamala's father vast property went to his stepson.

Young Kamala knew that the women of her days were denied two important rights— right to education and right to property. So she made up her mind to fight for women's rights. But she did not know where to begin. However, she was fortunate in having a holyman to encourage her and help her to achieve the aim: Sir Aurobindo, the poet, philosopher, who taught her everything she needed. The first thing he taught her was that God is in every human being. This helped her treat all men and women alike.

The second thing that Sir Aurobindo taught Kamala was that knowledge is very important to those who want to serve their fellow men. Kamala realised that if she wanted to improve Indian society, she should go abroad and learn about the conditions of other societies. She sold all her jewellery to raise money to study in England. She was a brilliant student. After completing her course in sociology, she returned to India and became a full time social worker.

Influenced by Gandhiji, Kamala also took to politics. She became a member of the Belgaum Congress. While in the Congress she profited from the company of wise and experience politicians who nurtured and guided her. In time, Kamaladevi became President of All India Women's Conference, and a champion for the cause of women.

Kamaladevi was a great traveller. As she saw that people longed for everything that was western. Indian art, music, dance and drama had no place in their lives, so this wonderful lady tried not only to bring back Indian culture but, more importantly, the self-respect we had lost through the centuries. Now Indians could feel proud of their own culture and crafts and all the things they themselves could make.

When Kamaladevi passed away in 1988, thousands all over the country mourned her death.

Sing a Song

Sing a song of people
Walking fast or slow;
People in the city,
Up and down they go.

People on the side walk,
People on the bus;
People passing, passing,
In back and front of us.

People on the subway,
Underneath the ground;
People riding taxis
Round and round and round.

People with their hats on,
Going in the doors;
People with umbrellas
When it rains and pours.

People in tall buildings
And in stores below;
Riding elevators
Up and down they go.

People walking singly,
 People in a crowd;
 People saying nothing,
 People talking loud.

People laughing, smiling,
Grumpy people too;
 People who just hurry
 And never look at you!

Sing a song of people,
 Who like to come and go;
 Sing of city people,
 You see but never know!

Three Questions

The thought came to a certain king that he would never fail if he knew three things. Three things were : What is the right time to begin something? Which people should he listen to? What is the most important thing for him to do?

The king, therefore, sent messengers throughout his kingdom, promising a large sum of money to anyone who would answer these three questions.

Many wise men came to the king, but they all answered his questions differently.

In reply to the first question, some said the king must prepare a timetable, and then follow it strictly. Only in this way, they said, could he do everything at its proper time. Others said that it was impossible to decide in advance the right time for doing something. The king should notice all that was going on, avoid foolish pleasures, and always do whatever seemed necessary at that time. Yet others said that the king needed a council of wise men who would help him act at the proper time. This was because one man would find it impossible to decide correctly, without help from other the right time for every action.

But then others said that there were some things which could be urgent. These things could not wait for the decision of the council. In order to decide the right time for doing something, it is necessary to look into the future. And only magicians could do that. The king, therefore, would have to go to magicians.

In their answers to the second question, some said that the people most necessary to the king were his councillors, other said, the priests. A few others chose the doctors. And yet others said that his soldiers were the most necessary.

To the third question, some said science. Others chose fighting, and yet others religious worship.

As the answers to his questions were so different, the king was not satisfied and gave no reward. Instead he decided to seek the advice of a certain hermit, who was widely known for his wisdom.

The hermit lived in a wood which he never left. He saw no one but simple people, and so the king put on ordinary clothes. Before he reached the hermit's hut the king left his horse with his bodyguard, and went on alone.

As the king came near the hermit's hut, he saw the hermit digging the ground in front of his hut. He greeted the king and continued digging. The hermit was old and weak, and as he worked, he breathed heavily.

The king went up to the hermit and said, "I have come to you wise hermit, to ask you to answer three questions : How can I learn to do the right thing at the right time? Who are the people I need most? And what affairs are the most important?"

The hermit listened to the king, but did not speak. He went on digging. "You are tired," said the king. "let me take the spade and work in your place."

"Thanks," said the hermit, giving the king his spade. Then he sat down on the ground. When the king had dug two beds, he stopped and repeated his questions. The hermit gave no answer, but stood up, stretching out his hand for the spade, and said, "Now you rest, and let me work."

But the king did not give him the spade and continued to dig.

One hour passed, then another. The sun went down behind the trees, and at last the king stuck the spade into the ground and said, "I came to you, wise man, for an answer to my questions. If you can give me no answer, tell me so and I will return home."

"Here comes someone running," said the hermit.

The king turned round and saw a man running towards them. His hands were pressed against his stomach, from which blood was flowing. When he reached the king, he fainted and fell to the ground. The king and the hermit removed the man's clothing and found a large wound in his stomach. The king washed and covered it with his handkerchief, but the blood would not stop flowing. The king re-dressed the wound until at last the bleeding stopped.

The man felt better and asked for something to drink. The king brought fresh water and gave it to him. By this time, the sun had set and the air was cool. The king with the hermit help carried the wounded man into the hut and laid him on the bed. The man closed his eyes and lay quiet. The king, tired by his walk and the work he had done, lay down on the floor and slept through the night. When he awoke, it was several minutes before he could remember where he was or who the strange man lying on the bed was.

"Forgive me!" said the man in a weak voice, when he saw that the king was awake.

"I do not know you and have nothing to forgive you for," said the king.

"You do not know me, but I know you. I am that enemy of yours who swore revenge on you, because you put my brother to death and seized my property. I knew you had gone alone to see that hermit, and I made up my mind to kill you on your way home. But the day passed and you did not return. So I left my hiding-place, and I came upon your bodyguard who recognised me and wounded me. I escaped from him but I should have died if you had not dressed my wounds. I wished to kill you, and you have saved my life. Now, if I live, I will serve you as your most faithful servant and order my sons to do the same. Forgive me!”

The king was very happy to have made peace with his enemy so easily, and to have won him over as a friend. He not only forgave him but said he would send his servants and his own doctor to look after him, and he promised to give back the man his property.

Leaving the wounded man, the king went out of the hut and looked round for the hermit. Before going away he wished once more to get answer to his questions. The hermit was on his knees sowing seeds in the beds that have been dug the day before. The king went up to the hermit and said, “For the last time, I beg you to answer my questions, wise man.”

“You have already been answered!” said the hermit still bending down to the ground and looking up at the king as he stood before him.

“How have I been answered? What do you mean?”

“Do you not see?” replied the hermit. “if you had not pitied my weakness yesterday and had not dug these beds for me, you would have gone away. Then that man would have attacked you and you would have wished you had stayed with me. So the most important time was when you were digging the beds. And I was the most important man and to do me good was your most important business. Afterwards, when the man ran to us, the most important time was when you were caring for him, because if you had not dressed his wound, he would have died without having made peace with you. So he was the most important man, and what you did for him was your most important business.

“Remember then, there is only one time that is important and that time is ‘Now’. It is the most important time because it is the only time we have any power to act.

“The most necessary person is the person you are with at a particular moment, for no one knows what will happen in the future and whether we will meet anyone else. The most important business is to do that person good, because we were sent into this world for that purpose alone.”

The Neighbourhood

The voice came closer, came towards the bedroom. The door was kicked open, and silhouetted against the drawing room light stood a tall young man—Tutu, the neighbour's son. He switched on the torch. Its beam searched through the dark room. It crept over the floor and under the bed, it zigzagged over the wall towards the window, glided down the curtains and travelled on. The young man took a step forward, then another. He did not speak a word, but the girl could hear his heavy breathing, as he advanced closer and closer.

Behind her, the girl felt her grandfather fighting off another coughing fit. 'Not now, grandfather', she prayed, not now.

The old man pressed his hand over his mouth in an attempt to choke off the rasping sound. But in vain. The young man heard him. He spun around and focussed the beam on the old man's face. Blinded by the sudden light, the old man shielded his face with his arms coughing pitifully all the while shrinking away from the intruder, the girl stared unbelievably at him.

'Tutu,' she whispered 'Tutu'. Hot angry tears sprang into her eyes and before she knew what she was doing she was out of the hiding place and hammering at his chest with her small fists.

'Leave my grandfather alone! Leave him alone,' she sobbed.

With a swift movement of his arm the youngman caught the struggling girl, and clamped a tight hand over her mouth. Then he kicked at the furniture, over turned the cot and smashed the lamp.

Drawn by the noise and turmoil two men appeared in the doorway 'What is happening? One of them roared, 'Have you got them'. The girl held her breath, going limp in the young man's arms with his back to the door, Tutu shouted over his shoulder, 'Nobody here'!

Get upstairs, quick, they must be upstairs, the cowards, 'and kicked the steel trunk with full force towards the door.'

The two men jumped back as the trunk hurled towards him, turned and rushed up the stairs.

The moment they were gone, the young man released the pressure around the girl's shoulder and whispered, 'listen to me with care, princess. You must get out of here as fast as you can. Climb through the window and get into the service lane through the rear door. Fast, girl get going. My mother is waiting for you. Our back door is open.

'Tutu, Oh, Tutu, cried the girl, 'Tutu, but ... you ... you' ... What will happen to grandfather?

I'll take care of him, go now, girl, run! The young man urged her and lifted her over the window sill. 'Run for your life!' With a soft thud the girl landed safely on the ground and was over at the back door in a second. She opened the door and stepped into the service lane. Behind her, she could hear the mob rampage through the rooms. She stopped in her tracks. Grandfather what would happen to grandfather? She could not leave him, could she? But Tutu's words hammered, inside her head: 'Run, girl, run for your life!'

The girl ran on, she tripped over rubbish and discarded kitchen waste. But on she ran till she reached the narrow beam of light that fell into the lane through a doorway. With trembling hands she opened the door and sobbing with exhaustion she fell into the arms of a waiting woman. The woman drew the trembling girl close and whispered into the girl's hair, 'Thank God, you are live. We were so worried about you and your grandfather. Is he coming with Tutu?

'I don't know, whispered the girl', I don't know, and she began to cry.

The woman rocked her gently in her arms and said, it's all right, its all right. It is all over now. Let's wait for them here. The girl did not know how long they waited and how long they listened into the night, to the sound of smashing glass, breaking wood and raucous voices filled with hatred and aggression. And then the noise died and the mob moved on, and the night quiet again.

The girl looked searchingly at the woman's face. Why had Tutu not come? Where was her grandfather? They could hear footsteps and low whispers. There were people coming. The girl thought, 'That must be them! Was it Tutu and her grandfather? She held her breath but then rushed towards the door, pulled it open and peered into the dark back lane. She could make out two figures not very far away, one leading the other and then their low voices reached her ears’.

‘We are almost there Grandfather, we have made it. I know you have lost almost everything but you are alive’.

‘We are all alive, my dear boy, thanks to you’, returned the old man, ‘you, the girl and me.’ And then he called into the night. Are you there bitia-rani?

My Friend and I

“Vijaylakshmi,” called out the teacher of class VIIB, nodding at the girl seated in the middle of the room, “please, come here.”

The girl in the candy-striped uniform rose her black eyes flickering nervous. Her thick, curly hair was pulled tightly back into a long, heavy plait but wisps of hair had escaped and framed her face into a halo of tiny curls.

She came up to the teacher’s desk and stood fidgeting with her uniform. “Yes, Ma’am,” she said timidly.

“Vijaylakshmi,” said the teacher, opening a magazine, “I read your essay in the children’s section. I liked it. It is very good. You seem to like writing.”

The girl nodded shyly, twisting the handkerchief in her hands.

“Your essay is titled, ‘My friend and I’. I think you should read it aloud to the class.”

The girl blushed. “Do I have to, Madam?” “You do not have to, but I would like you to.”

The girl looked at the teacher uncertainly and said, “Yes, Madam,” and took the magazine from her teacher’s hand.

"My Friend and I", she read. "Both my friend and I are from the South. She is from Vellore and I am from Chennai. Everyone here calls us Blackie. My friend does not mind, but I do. My friend says, so what if they call us Blackie. Let them. It does not bother me. Don't you know: Black is beautiful! When I look at her large, sparkling eyes and her straight black hair falling softly on her shoulders, I feel yes, she is beautiful. But not me, not with my awful frizzy hair."

I tell her, 'Black is beautiful is just a slogan'. 'Okay Agreed'. She laughs 'but how do you like this: Beauty lies in the eyes of the beholder?' I like it! It almost sounds like a poem. I wonder where she reads all this. I have never come across such beautiful words in the books I have read.

"My friend says, one has to be bold. She is, but I am not. She can walk over to a group of children and say, "Hi, I am Indira and this is Vijaylakshmi. Everyone calls us 'Blackie'. You can call us 'Blackie' too, if you like, otherwise Indi and Vija will be fine."

"I wish I could do that but I cannot. I have tried but I cannot bring myself to say the first 'Hello'."

"With her I can do many things. I run and win races. I look and make tasty snacks. I jump into the deep end of the pool. I climb the tallest tree. But when I stand in front of it the next day, alone it looks dangerously high. I wonder how I ever managed to climb it."

"My friend says," That's what friendship is about— doing things together. That is what friendship does to you, it gives you strength to be what you want and a little more too.

"I wonder what our friendship means to her. Whether she feels about me as I feel about her. That is something I have never asked her and I think I never will."

The girl closed the magazine and gave it back to her teacher, who said, “These are beautiful lines on friendship, Vijaylakshmi. I am glad you have such a good friend. Do we know her? Is she in our class?”

The girl dropped her head and shook it slightly.

“In our school maybe?”

The girl did not answer.

“Does she live in your colony?” The girl stared down at her black shoes silently. Then raising her eyes, Vijaylakshmi said bravely, “No, she does not stay in my colony. I do not have a friend.”

A hush fell over the classroom. No one moved. Forty pairs of eyes looked at the girl standing near the teacher’s desk, head bent.

Out of the uncomfortable silence rang a cheerful voice, “Yes, you have.”

A girl rose and walked down the aisle to the teacher’s desk. It was Nimmi Khanna, the most popular girl of the class. She held out her hand and said warmly, “Yes, you have Viji! – Me!”

The World-Renowned Nose

I record here the true story of that nose. The owner of that world-renowned nose had completed twenty-four years of age, when the story began. No one knew him before that. Does the twenty-fourth year in a person's life have any special significance? Who knows? If one looks through the recorded pages of world history one finds that the twenty-fourth year had a significance in many great lives. Students of history need hardly be told this.

The hero of our story was a cook, a kitchen worker if you like. He was not particularly intelligent. He could not read and write. His world was confined to the kitchen. He was totally indifferent to happenings outside the kitchen. Why should he pay attention to them? He could eat to his satisfaction; sleep; work. His daily routine was confined to these activities.

He did not know the names of the months of the year. When it was time for him to receive his salary his mother would come and take it. He lived a contented life till he reached his twenty-fourth year. Then an amazing thing happened!

His nose grew slighting in length. It passed his mouth and reached the level of his chin.

The nose began to grow in length everyday. Within a month the nose reached his navel. Did he feel uncomfortable? Not in the least! He could breathe freely. He could distinguish between smells.

However, because of his nose, the poor cook was dismissed from service.

What was the reason?

No group came forward with the battle cry: "Take back the dismissed employee." Political parties shut their eyes to this piece of rank injustice. No lover of humanity came forward to help.

The poor cook! No one had to tell him why he had lost his job. The reason was that the people living in the house where he worked could find no peace or quiet because of him. People came visiting night and day, to see the long-nosed one. Photographers pestered them, news reporters became a nuisance. A number of things were pilfered from the house.

As the dismissed cook sat starving in his lowly hut, he was convinced of one thing: his nose had acquired great publicity!

People from distant lands came to see him. They stood stunned with surprise at his long nose. Some touched it too. But no one asked: 'Have you eaten today? Why do you look so weak?' There was no money in the hut. Was he a wild animal to be kept starving? He might be a fool, but he was a human being. One day he called his old mother aside and told her in a whisper: 'Get these horrid people out!'

The mother promptly put them all out and closed the door.

Good fortune dawned on the mother and son after that day! People began to bribe the mother to see the son's nose! Some upholders of justice protested against this corruption. But Government did not take any action. Many protested against the inaction of the Government and joined revolutionary parties, out to sabotage the Government!

The income of the long-nosed one grew day by day. In six years the poor cook became a millionaire.

He acted thrice in films. What vast audiences were attracted by the technicolour feature film : 'The Human Submarine'! Six poets wrote epic poems about the noble qualities of the long-nosed one! Nine well-known writers wrote biographies of the long-nosed one and won wealth and acclaim.

His princely abode was also a guest - house open to all. Anyone at any time could get a meal there.

He had two secretaries. Both of them loved the long-nosed one. Both of them worshipped him. When two beautiful females love the same person at the same time, there is bound to be trouble. Troubles came into the life of the long-nosed one.

Other people also loved the long-nosed one. That long nose reaching down to the navel was considered a sign of greatness. The long-nosed one gave his opinion on important world events. Newspapers published his comments:

'An aeroplane with a speed of 10,000 miles an hour has been built! The long-nosed one commented thus on the event...!'

'Doctor Bundrose Furasiburose has brought a dead man to life! The long-nosed one made the following speech about it....!'

When people heard that the highest peak in the world had been scaled, they asked: 'What does the long-nosed one say about this?'

If the long-nosed one said nothing about an event... Phoo! It was unimportant. And so the long-nosed one was expected to comment about anything and everything!

Painting, the watch trade, the soul, publishing houses, life after death, the conduct of newspapers, hunting.

It was at this time that conspiracies were hatched to capture the long-nosed one. Capturing something, taking something by physical conquest, was nothing new. The major part of world history consists of conquests and captures.

First of all, it was the Government that made an attempt to capture the long-nosed one. They tried a confidence trick. The Government awarded him the title 'Chief among the long-nosed ones' and gave him a medal. It was the President himself who tied the bejewelled gold medal round the neck of the long-nosed one by the hand, the President tweaked the tip of the long nose. This was filmed by newsreel cameramen and shown in all theatres.

By that time the political parties in the country came forward enthusiastically. Comrade Long-Nose must give leadership to the people's struggle! Comrade Long-Nose indeed! Whose comrade? Comrade in what? God! Poor long-nosed one!

The long-nosed one must join the Party! Which party? There were many parties. How would the long-nosed one join different parties at the same time?

The long-nosed one said in his own tongue, 'Why should I join party and parties? Me, I am too tired.'

'Should I join any party?' the long-nosed one asked one of his secretaries. She said : 'Why should you?'

By that time one of the political parties had come out with the slogan, 'Our party is the long-nosed one's party, the long-nosed one's party is the people's party!'

Members of other parties were incensed by this. They got at one of the secretaries and made her issue a scathing statement against the long-nosed one: 'The long-nosed one has deceived the people! He has been cheating them all this while. He has made me a partner in this fraud. Let me declare the truth to the public: the long nose is made of rubber!'

Wow!!! All the newspapers splashed the news on their front pages. The nose of the long-nosed one is made of rubber!

Would the people keep quiet at this? Would they not react in anger? Cables, telephone calls, letters from all parts of the world! The President was allowed no peace or quiet. 'Destruction to the rubber nose of the long-nosed one! Down with the long-nose party! Long live revolution!'

When the anti-long-nose party put on this statement the opposing party made the other secretary issue a counter statement : 'Beloved countrymen, citizens! What she has said is a lie. She was trying to keep for herself the wealth and good name of Comrade Long-Nose. One of her brothers is in the opposite party. Let me reveal the true colours of the members of the other party. I am the faithful secretary of Comrade Long-Nose. I know for a fact that the nose of the Comrade is not made of rubber. It is as real as my own heart beating inside me. Long live the members of the party supporting Comrade Long-Nose! Long live revolution!’

What was to be done? There was confusion in the minds of the people. The leaders of the party against the long-nosed one began finding fault with the President and the Government : ‘Stupid Government! They gave the title of “Chief among the long-nosed ones” to the deceiver of the people. They gave him a gold medal. There is betrayal of national interest in all this. The President must resign. The Ministry must resign! The rubber-nosed one must be killed!’

The President reacted angrily. One morning the army and their tanks surrounded the house of the poor long-nosed one. He was arrested and taken away.

There was no news of the long-nosed one for some time. The People forgot about his existence. Then came fresh news with the impact of a nuclear bomb! Do you know what happened? Just when the people had forgotten everything came a brief announcement from the President : ‘The trial of the “Chief of the long-nosed ones” will take place on March 9th. Expert doctors who come as representatives of 48 countries will examine him. All the newspapers of the world will be represented. The proceedings will be filmed. People must keep calm.’ People are people. They could not keep calm. They came in large numbers into the metropolis. They set fire to police stations. They destroyed government buildings.

March 9, eleven a.m. The square in front of the Presidential Palace was a vast sea of humanity. The loudspeakers blared forth: ‘People must be disciplined. The examination has begun!’

The doctors surrounded the long-nosed one in the presence of the President and cabinet ministers. One doctor blocked the nostrils of the long-nosed one; he immediately opened his mouth wide.

Another doctor took a needle and punctured the tip of his nose. To his amazement a drop of blood appeared at the tip of the nose.

The doctors gave their unanimous verdict : “The nose is genuine.”

One of the female secretaries kissed the long-nosed one on the tip of the nose.

‘Long live Comrade Long-Nose! Long live the Chief of the long-nosed ones! Long live the Progressive people's party of the long-nosed one!’

As this shouting and revelry ended, the President thought of another gimmick. He nominated the long-nosed one as a member of parliament. That was the end of it all.

But the parties of which the long-nosed one was not a member formed a United Front and began to say: ‘The ministry must resign!’

Look at the way falsehood was being perpetuated! Would there not be confusion of thought? What would the poor intellectuals do?

16 Wheelchair Basketball

How did you get involved in wheelchair basketball?

I was at school once in a physical education lesson and the sports teacher said, "Come into the PE office." My doctor was there with a friend and they were telling me I should be more independent and push myself more, so I said, "Do you know where I could find out about basketball? and they told me who to get in touch with." So I rang them up and it went on from that. Now I am in the Meteors, a liverpool team, and the North-West team. I am in National and International Squad too but I don't play as yet. They have ten people who play, but some of them are moving up in age and I will follow on after them.

I would not be where I am now if I had not rung on that Thursday night. That was only a year ago. I did not play in any sports before that. I did not push myself in the chair. The second week after I started coming to basketball, no one was pushing me any more. Now I always push myself. At school now, everyone's always asking if they can push me and help me up and open doors. It is fine, opening doors, but I do not want to be pushed.

How often do you train?

About five times a week. A lot of people who play wheelchair basketball probably train at least three times a week. They are very dedicated. We play in a national league. You are supposed to be 14 to play in the league, but I have got special permission to play even though I am underage because of my ability and size. It is the national junior games this weekend and you can be under 14 to play here because it is the junior games, but I am not playing with my age group here, I am playing with the older ones, the 18 and 19 years old.

What are the rules of wheelchair basketball?

There is very little difference between wheelchair basketball and the running game. In running game, you are allowed to paces and then you have bounce or pass the ball. In wheelchair basketball you are allowed two pushes and then you have to bounce it or pass it. On the offensive you are allowed 30 seconds whereas in running basketball you are allowed 20. The baskets are at the same height. A lot of people think they lower them but they do not.

Do you need a special wheelchair to play?

Yes, you have to have your own sports chair measured up for yourself. When you are a new player you usually borrow one until you are sure you want one because they are really expensive. Sports wheelchairs are very light and they have got no brakes. The foot rest has to be exactly 11cm from the floor. That is to avoid injury— it is very easy to catch ankles or toes otherwise. Most sports chairs have camber bars on them, which make the wheels spread out at an angle. You can adjust the angle— upto 15 degrees and it makes it easier to manoeuvre the chairs which are very ‘tippy’ because the wheels are set so far back. The more the camber the faster the chair turns. As soon as I first got this chair and tried a shot I tipped over backwards and fell out. You need a lot of balance, but you get used to it.

What do you like about the game?

I like the competitions and I just enjoy playing. It made me a lot more self-confident and a lot more self-reliant. I had thought about playing basketball before, but I never did anything about it. I have become a lot fitter and stronger since I have been playing. I can remember how I could not reach the basket when I first started but I can reach three-pointers now. I have met lots of people through the game and made lots of friends. I did not know any other disabled people and its changed my outlook a lot. Before, I did not know what I wanted to do but now I want to play in the paralympic team the men's full international team.

Three Days to See

I have often thought it would be a blessing if each human being were stricken blind and deaf for a few days at some time during his early adult life. Darkness would make him more appreciative of sight, silence would teach him the joys of sound.

I who cannot see find hundred of things to interest me through mere touch. I feel the delicate symmetry of a leaf. I pass my hands lovingly about the smooth skin of a silver birch, or the rough, shaggy bark of a pine. In spring I touch the branches of trees hopefully in search of a bud, the first sign of awakening Nature after her winters sleep. Occasionally, I am very fortunate; I place my hand gently on a small tree and feel the happy quiver of a bird in full song.

At times, my heart cries out with longing to see all these things. If I can get so much pleasure from mere touch, how much more beauty must be revealed by sight and I have imagined what I should most like to see if I were given the use of my eyes, say, for just three days.

I should divide the period into three parts. On the first day, I should want to see the people whose kindness and companionship have made my life worth living. I do not know what it is to see into the heart of a friend through that 'window of the soul,' the eye. I can only 'see' through my fingertips the outline of a face. I can detect laughter, sorrow and many other obvious emotions. I know my friends from the feel of their faces.

The next day, I should arise with the dawn and see the thrilling miracle by which night is transformed into day. I should behold with awe the magnificent panorama of light with which the sun awakens the sleeping. This day I should devote to a hasty glimpse of the world, past and present. I pageant of man's progress and so I should go to the museums. There my eyes would see the condensed history of the earth-animals and the races of men pictured in their natural environment, gigantic carcasses of dinosaurs and mastodons that roamed the earth before man appeared, with his tiny stature and powerful brain to conquer the animal kingdom.

The following morning, I should again greet the dawn, anxious to discover new delights, new revelations of beauty. Today this third day, I shall spend in the work a day world amid the haunts of men going about the business of life. The city becomes my destination.

First, I stand at a busy corner, merely looking at people, trying by sight of them to understand something of their daily lives. I see smiles and I am happy, I see serious determination and I am proud I see suffering and I am compassionate.

At midnight, permanent night would close in on me again. Naturally in those three short days, I should not have seen all I wanted to see. Only when darkness had again descended upon me should I realize how much I had left unseen.

I who am blind can give one hint to those who can see— One admonition to those who would make full use of the gift of sight: Use your eyes as if tomorrow you would be stricken blind. And the same method can be applied to other senses. Hear the music of voices, the song of a bird, the mighty strains of an orchestra, as if you would be stricken deaf tomorrow. Touch each object you want to touch as if tomorrow your tactile sense would fail. Smell the perfume of flowers, taste with relish each morsel, as if tomorrow you could never smell and taste again. Make the most of every sense; glory in all the facets of pleasure and beauty which the world reveals to you through the several means of contact, which Nature provides. But of all the senses, I am sure that sight must be the most delightful.
